Affective Education Workshop
Self Relationship (III)

(PGSSW0038)

Introduction	We, humans are kind of social animals and social relationships pervade every aspect of human life. In fact, we are far more dependent on our social relationships than the other animals. Interacting with other people is inevitable and so do you think you know how to establish rapport, get along with, as well as managing conflicts with others? What skills do you need if you would like to have adaptive interaction and develop healthy relationship with people around you?
	With 3 separated yet correlated monthly sessions held from April to June, you will be provided with an opportunity to learn more about social relationships, particularly getting along with your peers, family and teachers.
	We will be having the last session of this series of workshops, which comes to tackle issues about getting along with family members (parents & siblings) and teachers. In fact, family is the very first social context that we learn and practise ways to interact with others. Such experience help us develop communication and social skills. And then we stretch to contact with the world, such as schools and workplaces… So your family might mirror very closely some of the situations in school.
	As such, you are going to explore how your traits are associated with giftedness, which are manifested in the family and school. On the other hand, you will better understand the pressure given by parents and teachers, as well as being equipped with coping skills to manage conflicts among these people that you interact in daily life.

Social Relationship (III)	Getting along with your family (parents & siblings) and teachers
