

Affective Education Workshop – Self Concept (II)

(PGSSW0040)

Introduction

Developing a personal identity is an important developmental task, and it may be a particular challenge for gifted students. Gifted students, like any other teens, develop an identity through hearing what others say about them, identifying what they feel and value, and thinking about themselves in relationship with others. Knowing and being comfortable with the self can help gifted students to accomplish developmental milestones smoothly. As a gifted student, how well do you understand about yourself? Some might say self-acceptance is about recognising and accepting one's strengths and weaknesses, so what are the common strengths and weaknesses that gifted students share? What is the relationship between attribution theory and giftedness? In the Self Concept workshop series I, II and III, we will learn a list of giftedness theories, explore our strengths and weaknesses, view from others' perspectives etc, and most importantly, understand more about ourselves. Our second session covers the following three –

Self Concept (II)	Self-acceptance
	Strengths and weaknesses
	Attribution factors for success and failure
