

Inside Out Series: Self Concept (III)

(F2IOS003W)

Introduction

Inside Out Series is a workshop series related to affective education, it covers topics like self-concept, self-management and social relationship of gifted students. This series aims at fostering gifted students' whole-person development from the inside out by enabling them to understand themselves, enhance their self-management skills, and eventually build positive social relationships with the outside world.

A series of 3 interrelated workshops will be held from September to November, one in each month. In the workshops, you will be able to learn on various topics related to self-concept of gifted students, including a list of giftedness theories, explore our strengths and weaknesses, view from others' perspective etc, and mostly importantly, understand more about ourselves.

Self-concept refers to how you think about, evaluate or perceive yourself, including your attributes and who and what the self is. For instance, your self-expectation of academic achievement is closely associated with your self-concept of cognitive abilities. In other words, when you bear the gifted label, you might expect yourself to be a constant achiever who always has outstanding academic performance. Anything that less than A+ is considered a failure and you may even be afraid to make mistakes.

Meanwhile, you may struggle to live up to the expectations of your significant others such as parents and teachers for they might think you are gifted and so are very smart and able to master all things. As a result, you'll find yourself being exhausted and stressed to expect awards and praise in every aspect. Through the last session of the Self Concept workshop series, you can understand how expectations of self and others have impacts on you and hence make adjustment when you are over-expected.
