Inside Out Series: Social Relationship (III)

Managing Conflicts

(F2IOS009W2)

Living in a socialised society, we all need to know how to collaborate and communicate effectively with other people. Do you think you can establish harmonious relationships with others, get along well with them, and handle interpersonal conflicts effectively? What skills are needed for building good interpersonal relationships?

In this third workshop of the series, you will learn how to tackle issues about getting along with family members (parents & siblings) and teachers. Family is the very first social context that we learn and practise ways to interact with others. Such experience helps us develop communication and social skills. Then we stretch to schools and other social settings, so your family might mirror very closely some of the situations in school.

You are going to explore how your traits are associated with giftedness, which is manifested in the family and school. On the other hand, you will learn effective social skills to cope with the conflicts between parents, and teachers through discussion and sharing.

Inside Out Series is a workshop series related to affective education, it covers topics like self-concept, self-management and social relationship of gifted students. This series aims at fostering gifted students' whole-person development from the inside out by enabling them to understand themselves, enhance their self-management skills, and eventually build positive social relationships with the outside world. In the Social Relationship workshop series, I, II and III, you will be able to learn various topics relating to social relations, such as social styles, communication skills, empathy, getting along with your peers, family and teachers, conflict management, etc. If you are interested in understanding social relations, don't miss this opportunity. You are also encouraged to complete the whole series for mastering the social techniques progressively.
