

Inside Out Series: Self Concept II

(F2IOS002W)

Introduction of the Workshop

Developing a personal identity is an important developmental task, and it may be a particular challenge for gifted students. Gifted students, like any other teens, develop an identity through hearing what others say about them, identifying what they feel and value, and thinking about themselves in relationships with others. Knowing and being comfortable with oneself can help gifted students to accomplish developmental milestones smoothly. As a gifted student, how well do you understand yourself? Some might say self-acceptance is about recognising and accepting one's strengths and weaknesses, so what are the common strengths and weaknesses that gifted students share? What is the relationship between attribution theory and giftedness?

In this workshop, we will explore various areas of self-concept such as self-acceptance, recognising our strengths and weaknesses, as well as attribution factors for success and failure.

Introduction of the Series

The 'Inside Out Series' is a workshop series related to affective education, it covers topics like self-concept, self-management and social relationships of gifted students. This series aims at fostering gifted students' whole-person development from the inside out by enabling them to understand themselves, enhance their self-management skills, and eventually build positive social relationships with the outside world. In the workshops of the Self Concept Series, you will be able to learn on various topics related to the self-concept of gifted students, including a list of giftedness theories, explore our strengths and weaknesses, view from others' perspective etc, and most importantly, understand more about ourselves.
