Introduction of the speaker:

Dr. Kimberley Chandler is the Curriculum Director at the Center for Gifted Education at The College of William and Mary and Clinical Assistant Professor. Her background includes teaching gifted students in a variety of settings, serving as an administrator of a gifted program, and providing professional development training nationally and internationally.

Kimberley serves on the National Association for Gifted Children Board of Directors, is Newsletter Editor for the Council for Exceptional Children's Talented and Gifted Special Interest Division (CEC-TAG), and is a USA Representative to the World Council for Gifted and Talented Children.

Kimberley co-authored a book titled Effective Curriculum for Underserved Gifted Students. She has also served as the editor of many curriculum materials from the Center for Gifted Education at William and Mary. She is currently co-authoring a book that will be published in 2013 about designing appropriate professional development experiences for practitioners in gifted education. Her research interests include curriculum policy and implementation issues in gifted programs, the role of administrators in gifted program development, and the design and evaluation of professional development programs for teachers of the gifted.

In the past few years, Dr. Chandler had been invited by The Hong Kong Academy for Gifted Education and the Education Bureau to deliver professional development training for school leaders and teachers. These professional development courses were well received by the participants.
